JOHN COLLINS is a national religion consultant with Sadlier Publishing. Over the span of his career, he has been an elementary school principal, elementary school teacher, director of curriculum, instruction, and professional development. He is also a long time catechist and DRE. John has been involved in religious education since 1972. His presentations always bring the practical and realistic to catechesis with his experience as both a professional educator and a catechetical leader.

Through this workshop, you will . . .

- Understand the relationship of assessment with curriculum and instruction
- Increase knowledge of different types of assessment
- Re-visit Bloom's Revised Taxonomy and its relationship to assessment
- Consider options for appropriate and "doable" assessments in faith formation programs
- Develop an action plan for your program to include a framework for curriculum, instruction, and assessment.
